ADV. WRITING.

MUCH advertising suffers from the inability of the amateur writer to get started without 15 minutes of "cranking up" and his inability to stop until the termians is half a mile behind. Shall I hit the nail squarely on the head for you, Mr. Merchant or Manufacturer, with advertisements, booklets, circulars, etc., that carry the "punch" and possess terseness, timeliness, impressiveness and persuasiveness? REMAINS OF ORPHAN ASYLUM AT SALEM AFTER FIRE AND INMATES.

Salem, Mass., June 29.—The city of Salem had added horror when they found that the city was in danger of suffering a water famine after the fire which made 10,000 homeless and caused damages estimated at $10,000,000. The Red Cross Society at Washington telegraphed $5,000 to aid the fire sufferers.

LIGHTNING STRUCK THRICE SAME PLACE

For the Third Time a Barn is Burned on Gorsline Farm at Leibhardt—New Site Will be Selected For New Barn.

Leibhardt, June 29.—At Leibhardt the large basement barn of Stephen E. Gorsline on the late Evert Gorsline farm was struck by lightning during the shower on Wednesday night, June 24, and burned to the ground. The fire was first discovered by Mr. Gorsline's son, Melbourne Gorsline, early Thursday morning, June 25, when the roof was all afire. However Mr. Gorsline and some of his neighbors got the horses and cattle and some of the machinery out. The barn was entirely empty of hay and fodder. There was an insurance of $800 on the barn and $200 on the contents in the Olive Co-operative Fire Insurance Company, which will partly cover Mr. Gorsline's loss.

It will be remembered that this makes the third barn to be struck by lightning and burned up on the same spot. The first one was struck on August 8, 1888, when Mr. Gorsline's two brothers, Luther and Andrew J., were both killed and all of the harvest destroyed. The second one was struck just ten years later on August 8, 1888, when there was a good young horse killed and Stephen Gorsline was badly hurt and all the harvest destroyed.

Mr. Gorsline will select a new spot for his new barn. The writer of this, who is the only living brother of Mr. Gorsline, and ex-postmaster of Tabasco, also saw a hay house 24x40 feet with a 16 feet post adjoining the first barn landed to the ground in a severe wind and rain storm on June 29, 1874, and the entire rye crop consisting of 30 bushels sowing on the ground destroyed by a hail storm on June 12, 1872, and the glass in the four windows of the dwelling house on the north west ends entirely broken out.

ASSASSINS BOAST OF THEIR SUCCESS

Bomb Thrower Who Failed and Marksman Who Succeeded in Killing Archduke and Wife are Defiant.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Sarajevo, Bosnia, June 29.—Defiant and boastful, the two young Slavs who were directly implicated in the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir apparent to the Austrian throne, and his morganatic wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, in this city yesterday, were subjected to an all night examination by the military police.

"It was a good Slavic bomb. It came from Belgrade. And there are more bombs in Belgrade too."

The 18 year old prisoner, Prinzip, who fired the shots which ended the lives of the Austrian heir and his consort expressed no contrition. On the countrary he posed as a hero declaring that his name "Would go down in history."

The homes of the two prisoners were raided shortly after their arrest and the police seized letters and other documents which led to the discovery that the Slavs are maintaining an organization here for the purpose of harrassing the Austrian government. The organization is said by the police to be anarchistic, although Cabrinvitch and Prinzip declare that its members are Nationalists, "some of whom are a trifle radical."

This was the version of the murder given today after the stories of eye witnesses and the police had been taken and sifted.

The Archduke and his wife were riding in an automobile from the railroad station to Town hall when some one standing at the curb of a crowded street, threw a small hand grenade at the motor-car. The thrower's aim was good and the missile went straight toward the head of the Archduke, who threw up his arm and warded it off.

The infernal machine fell into the street where it exploded a few moments later as an automobile containing two members of the Archduke's suite was passing over it. The machine was wrecked and Count Boos Waldeck and Lieut. Merizzi were badly wounded. They were taken to the Garrison hospital and the Archduke and his wife continued along the route laid out for them.

The Archduke's wife was fearful and begged her husband to return to the railroad station, but he refused, saying that he would not disarrange the programe that had been laid out.

The ceremonies at Town Hall were consumed in about half an hour, during which the Archduke made angry references to the attempt on his life. His rage had been increased by the appearance of a number of Servian flags.

The streets were lined with troops for the return trip to the railway station, but despite these precautions the death plot was carried to a successful conclusion.

Just as the motor car was passing the corner of Rudolf street, a young man who wore no hat, stepped from the fringe of spectators at a point where the military guard was weakest and fired two shots from a magazine pistol. At the first shot the Archduke lurched forward, the blood spurting from this mouth. His wife threw her arms about him and as she did so, a bullet struck her in the body and both rolled to the floor of the automobile with their arms clasped about each other.

The car was driven rapidly to the palace, where physicians made an examination and said death had been instantaneous.

The bodies lie in state in the governor's palace, pending word from Vienna as to their disposition. A military guard of honor stands at the threshold of the death chamber and the caskets rest upon the Austrian standard.

"We did not want to kill the woman, but it was necessary to sacrifice her in order to insure the death of the Archduke," said he.

The youth said he had been practising with a pistol for several weeks in order to insure accuracy. He evidently knew that the Archduke, beneath his uniform, wore a coat of woven silk, of a texture designed to turn a bullet. The shot was aimed at the nobleman's head and passed through the neck, severing the jugular vein. The second bullet struck the Duchess near the heart.

The police found a bomb in a yard near the scene of the fatal shooting, which showed that elaborate precautions has been taken by the plotters to insure the death of the Austrian heir.

This was a day of mourning and excitement in Sarajevo. The burgeomaster issued a proclamation calling upon the residents of the city to give evidence of their loyalty to the Austrian government with signs of mourning for the dead. Flags were at half mast, special services were held in the churches, pictures of the dead Archduke, draped with crepe, were exhibited in many windows.

The manufacturing plants were closed and the streets were filled with groups of men and women who discussed the double assassination and speculated upon its consequences. A big crowd collected around the jail where the prisoners were confined. There were exhibitions of anger against the murderer and his accomplice, especially among the women to whom the Archduke was endeared because of his devotion to his wife.

The Archduke's three children were not with their parents. They had been left behind at Francis Ferdinand's Austrian palace.

BURGLARS ENTER O. & W. STATION

Early Sunday morning the O. & W. station on Fair street extension was broken into by thieves who cut the wires leading to the telephone pay station in the waiting room and tore down the coin box from the wall and taking it out along the railroad tracks broke it open. Evidently not content with the amount of money they secured they came back and rifled the chewing gum machine hanging outside the baggage room and removed the coins it contained and left the gum. Local talent is thought to have committed the robbery which was reported to the police.

Fay Schmidt, who drives for Van's garage, was arrested on Sunday afternoon by Policeman Daun for driving an automobile without a license number. When arraigned this morning before Recorder Grogan Schmidt pleaded guilty and was fined $3 which he paid.

DWAARKILL MAN IN CONTEMPT OF COURT

For disregarding orders of the court, George W. DuBois, who resides nears Dwaarkill in the town of Shawangunk, was today adjudged in contempt of court by Judge Jenkins and was fined $151 and $25 costs.

Some time ago an action was commenced against Mr. DuBois by Myra Meeker, who obtained judgment against him. The action was for rent. The judgment was not paid and DuBois was ordered to appear before a referee for examination in supplementary proceedings. He did not appear. Then an order to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt for his failure to appear was granted. The order was returnable today but Mr. DuBois did not put in an appearance.

Andrew Wright Lent of Highland, who appeared for the plaintiff, asked that DuBois be adjudged in contempt, and in his statement to the court of the facts of the case said that DuBois had disregarded the injunction clause of the order previously served, and had disposed of his personal property in disregard of that order. The fine stated was imposed.

Albert Mauterstock, the well known contractor and manufacturer at No. 113 Broadway, placed the beautiful memorial window in Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church last week for James Tongue and son in memory of their wife and mother, Mrs. Sarah J. Tongue. The subject of the window is "Bethany or Christ at the Home of Mary and Martha." This window came from the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company of New York. Mr. Mauterstock placed all the thirteen windows in the church, also secured the design and purchased ten of the number. Trinity now has one of the finest group of windows and auditoriums along the river.

AUTO VICTIM FOUND DEAD.

Body of Catskill Man Found by Thomas Craig.

In the state road about two miles south of Catskill, at midnight Saturday, Thomas Craig, who was returning from Kingston to Catskill in his automobile, discovered the dead body of a man. The body lay in the middle of the road and apparently death had been caused by a motor car. There were many bruises on the man's head and face and his left hip was broken. When the body was viewed by Coroner George L. Branch he said the man had been dead some time when found by Craig. Later it was learned the victim was Philip Lutz of 60 Arndt street, Detroit, Mich., who had been working on the Percy Holmes farm below Catskill.

By the side of the body a broken piece of a windshield was found and the police are looking for a machine with such a defect. One was seen at Leeds, a hamlet three miles north of Catskill, Sunday morning. Whoever struck down Lutz went on his way without stopping to see whether he was dead or not. Lutz's sons are well-to-do citizens of Detroit and are in the automobile business. Lutz was in Catskill Saturday afternoon and started to walk home late in the evening.

BIG INDIAN.

Big Indian, June 27.—Mildred Garrison, who has been attending school at Kingston, has returned to her home in this place.

Clarence Pfeifer of New Jersey has acceped the position as evening operator in the Big Indian station.

Mr. and Mrs. James Smith and son, Cortland, of Griffin's Corners, and Miss Lottie Whipple of Arkville were the guests of relatives in this place last week.

On Thursday last George Jocelyn of Oliverea tied his horse in front of T. J. Bryant's store while he went to the station. In the meanwhile the 10:30 train bound for Kingston was standing at the station and the horse became frightened at the locomotive that was just leaving the station. The horse ran away breaking the wagon, but fortunately no other serious damage was done. The animal was brought to rein before it had gone far.

Miss Eva Yerry is stopping with Mrs. Hattie Rilly.

Some of the young people of this place attended the opening dance at the Slide Mountain House Hall on Thursday evening.

Shokan, June 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Golden Van Benschoten, who have been visiting old friends here, have returned.

The Children's Day exercises of the Reformed Church last Sunday evening were very largely attended. Much credit is due Mrs. I. H. Dumont for the successful arrangement and execution of the program.

The hay crop promises to be the best in years. Hay will be scarce locally, however, owing to the fact that the city has set out most of its fields in pine and spruce.

Judging by the display of fireworks every evening on the corner, the boys will be short of cash before the Fourth rolls around.

Basil Cudney, our new butcher, is now running a wagon in addition to his thriving shop business.

Henry Coons, who died recently, was one of the few remaining old men who have lived in Olive all their lives and have witnessed the very remarkable changes which have taken place here. Mr. Coons was a farmer of the old schol type, one who loved the soil and "took a joy in his job." So successful was he in his chosen line that he was considered the leading agriculturist in this section. When other farmers encountered problems in their work they looked to Mr. Coons for advice and the wisdom and fruits of his long experience were always appreciated. He was a farmer, first, last and all the time, and a good one, too.

Miss Elizabeth Giles has been spending several weeks in Poughkeepsie.

Quite a number of young fellows are employed on the boulevard construction. Good looking lot of boys, too.

John Davis is in charge of the state road this year and is looking after this important work in good style.

Are You Eating Squabs Regularly?

You ought to. They are delicious. Squabs are young pigeons only four weeks old. Perhaps you have bought in the markets old pigeons, often offered as squabs. They are comparatively tough and stringy. The genuine squabs, such as we sell, are right out of the nest, fat, plump, juicy, weighing from fourteen ounces to a pound apiece. They are fully feathered. Same as old birds. Squabs are highly esteemed as an article of food because the juice of the squab (which is pure liquid protoplasm) is the most nourishing and vitalizing fluid known. In fact there is no bird or flesh food that can equal the squab for condensed nourishment. We can supply squabs at any time on receipt of your order. Prices 75 cents per pair, by parcel post 15 cents extra.

The Princess Aline

She Had Remarkable Diplomatic Talent

By MILLARD MALTBIE

The Princess Aline of Crakovia was an object of great concern to her father, King Ludwig. His majesty had five sons and one daughter. The succession being therefore established beyond a reasonable doubt by her brothers, the princess was of no importance whatever on that account. But she was of great value in another direction. A province, Guadix, had been wrested in war from Crakovia by King Philip of Ancovia, an adjoining power. A proposition had come from Philip for the hand of the Princess Aline for Ferdinand, crown prince of Ancovia. It had been declined. A deputation was then sent by King Philip offering, if the matrimonial proposition were accepted, to restore to Crakovia the province that had been ceded.

"I WILL NOT MARRY PRINCE FERDINAND."

King Ludwig was not only astonished at this remarkable offer; he was delighted. Without consulting his daughter in the matter he replied at once that the proposition was accepted.

The deputation was about to return with this reply when the princess was informed that she was to take a husband she had never seen without having been consulted. She at once notified her father that she did not intend to marry any one and she certainly would not marry Prince Ferdinand. King Ludwig sent for his daughter and informed her that she must marry the prince because on her doing so depended the restoration of the lost province, whereupon Aline replied that if a hundred provinces could be gained by her marriage still would she remain a maid. At this her father was so dumfounded that he could voice no reply.

When the deputation returned to Ancovia and reported the failure of this second proposition King Philip was both astonished and perplexed. The laws of Ancovia with regard to the marriages of members of the royal family were very closely drawn. So many provisions had been incorporated into them that there was not a single princess of the blood in Europe except Aline who was eligible. The king called his son into his cabinet and told him what had taken place, concluding with the words:

"I propose to declare war against Crakovia and compel the princess to marry you."

"Father," said the prince thoughtfully, "there is an old saying that you can take a horse to water, but you can't make him drink. You may conquer Crakovia and annex it to your kingdom, you may make the princess a prisoner and force her to the altar, but you can't make her say that she will take me for her wedded husband."

"My son," replied the king after weighing the prince's words, "you are right. Such a course might succeed with a man, but not with a woman."

The Princess Aline being the only daughter in the royal family, besides being very attractive—though it was known that she had a will of her own—had been very popular till it leaked out that she had refused in marriage the crown prince of Ancovia, with the lost province in the palm. The cession of this territory had been as sore a point with the Crakovians as the surrender of Alsace and Lorraine with the French. A century and a half before the cession of Gaudix, Crakovia had been obliged to cede one-half its territory to Ancovia, and when Gaudix was lost to them they were broken hearted. For these reasons, when it became known that Aline had refused to give herself in exchange for Gaudix, popular favor turned against her, and she became as much hated as she had before been beloved. She appeared as usual in public places till her treatment by the people became markedly disrespectful; then she retired to one of her father's country palaces, where it was understood she lived a secluded life.

One day Prince Ferdinand happened to go through the room where his sisters were studying their lessons under their governess. His attention was arrested by the young woman, and under pretense of inquiring what the children were studying he fell into conversation with their teacher. So pleased was he with her intelligence that he made frequent visits to the schoolroom and asked his mother, the queen, if the governess might not be admitted to the social functions of the court. The queen assented, and the prince announced the fact to the recipient of the royal favor. To his surprise, the latter declined the honor, saying that her mind was concentrated on the education of her pupils and she would not like to have it diverted.

There was in her something so superior to other women with whom the prince came in daily contact that his admiration for the governess grew rapidly. Whenever he found it possible to get away from the fawning associates who surrounded him he would seek his untitled friend and refresh himself with her engaging though independent personality.

One day the prince awoke to the fact that he loved one whom as a prince of the blood he could not marry. He kept his secret from her for some time, but at last yielded to the pressure within him and avowed his love. She did not reproach him for so doing, but the next day handed in her resignation as teacher for the royal children, and when the prince sought her again he found that she had left the palace. He endeavored to learn where she had gone, but failed to gain any trace of her.

From this time a marked change was noticed in Prince Ferdinand. In public he had caught the popular heart by a happy manner that was natural to him, but now he seldom appeared to the people and when he did looked gloomy and morose. It became known that there was no woman living whom the laws of his country would permit him to marry, and those who attributed the change in him to this cause sympathized with him instead of blaming him. Nevertheless, in the main the prince was an example of the adage, "Laugh and the world laughs with you; weep and you weep alone." He fulfilled this almost literally, for princes are dependent on friends the same as other persons, and Ferdinand's intimate friends ceased to find pleasure in his society. He was therefore left much to himself. However, he was very indifferent to all associates.

One day a messenger arrived at the court of Ancovia announcing that if King Philip desired King Ludwig would be pleased to reopen negotiations for the hand of the Princess Aline. King Philip at once sent for his son and announced the glad tidings.

"Something must have occurred to change the conditions," he said to the prince. "I shall withdraw the offer to restore the province of Guadix. We may get the princess without losing this valuable territory."

"Do what you like in the matter," replied Ferdinand. "I shall be obedient to your wishes."

In truth, the prince secretly hoped that the withdrawal of the previous offer would break off the negotiations. The idea of marriage except with the girl he loved was repulsive to him.

So King Philip replied to King Ludwig that he would be pleased to renew his request for the hand of the princess, but he could not now consent to give up Guadix. King Ludwig replied that the matter was in the hands of his daughter and if the crown prince wished for her hand he would have to make the request in person. Philip was delighted.

"I told you so," he said to his son. "Something has occurred to change the situation. Go to the princess, but not as a beggar. We'll get her and keep Guadix."

The prince departed at the head of a splendid retinue and with handsome presents to seek a wife simply that he might give an heir to the throne. There was no method of traveling in those days except on or behind horses and not much communication between the different countries. King Philip waited impatiently to hear of the prince's success, hoping that no cession of territory would be necessary. Finally a message came from his son stating that the Princess Aline would marry him, demanding not only the restoration of Guadix, but that much larger territory which had been ceded to Ancovia a century and a half before. What was more astonishing than this was that the prince urged that the conditions be accepted.

The shock was more than King Philip could bear. He was an old man and in poor health. He fell on the floor in a faint, was carried to his bed and died the next day.

Immediately after the king's demise the chancellor of the realm made post-haste to Crakovia to announce to the crown prince his accession to the throne. He found Ferdinand basking in the princess' smiles, but just as the chancellor was about to kneel with the words, "The king is dead—long live the king!" he stopped, paralyzed. In the Princess Aline he recognized the governess of the royal children of Ancovia. But, recovering himself, he found voice to make the announcement.

Before King Ferdinand left Crakovia he had a consultation with King Ludwig wherein a new distribution of all the territory that had been ceded to Crakovia was made, Crakovia getting the larger share. After the documents had been signed the wedding between the young king and the princess took place amid such rejoicings as had never before occurred in Crakovia. The lost popularity of the princess was not only restored to her, but she could not appear in public without receiving a storm of acclamation.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 29, 1914

In commending the Workmen's Compensation Act, Governor Glynn says that "so far as it has been possible to do so, every contingency has been foreseen and taken care of." We suppose that it was impossible to foresee that farm laborers and domestic servants, not to mention other smaller classes of workers, might get hurt or killed. No provision has been made for them or their dependents, although they are as worthy of consideration as workers in the more highly paid skilled occupations.

Chairman Barnes hits the nail on the head when he says that "it is probable that the 110,000 enrolled Progressives will take orders and nominate whomever they are told to nominate, but that any man in the Republican party who attempts to control the Republican electorate of this State will find himself in a sorry situation." No one can deny that the Bull Meese, in spite of their loud denunciations of boss rule, are bossed by one man to an extent unparalleled in political history, and the same man has the effrontery to demand also that the Republicans nominate a ticket under his supervision. Yet there are some people who labor under the impression that the Colonel has a sense of humor.

Carranza may be the doddering old fool that he has been described, but he is nevertheless able to "put one over" on the Wilson-Bryan outfit, or the A. B. C. mediators, for that matter, whenever he feels like it. His latest performance is to state that he cannot agree to send delegates to confer informally with Huerta's representatives until he has consulted with his generals in the field. This is expected to take some time, although Villa is the only one who really needs to be consulted, and his opinion is already known to Carranza. It is all a bare-faced scheme to cause additional delay. Our administration must be heartily disgusted with the mess into which it has fallen. Huerta, whom it denounced, is the only Mexican who has acted the part of a statesman, while the rebels, whom our Government has assisted so much, return our favors by playing sharp tricks on us.

The work preliminary to the revision of the charter of the City of Kingston has proceeded somewhat slowly, as is inevitable in such affairs. The original committee, appointed according to a plan suggested by the Mayor, was appointed some time ago, and this body deemed it advisable to associate with itself an advisory committee. The selection of the latter was a delicate task, because of the great abundance of suitable men to choose from and because of the expediency of not making it too large numerically. The net result is an advisory committee which is believed to be about as representative as it could be made. It includes large and small taxpayers, men of various races and occupations and of diversified political and social affiliations. Moreover, a call has been issued asking all interested citizens to tell the commission, either orally or in writing, their views upon the subject. We have been close enough to this movement to know that nobody connected with it has shown any indication that he has "an ax to grind," and we have high hope that the eventual result will be the enactment of a charter which will make Kingston in every way a more desirable place of residence.

The thought of assassination is so horrifying to the healthy human mind that it is impossible to justify it under any circumstances, and one naturally shrinks from admitting that any good result can ever come from it. Nevertheless, as Mr. F. Cunliffe-Owen points out in the New York Sun, the murder of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, has one mitigating feature. Usually, the assassination of a ruler makes political conditions worse than before, as we know from our own national history, but in this case the elimination of the victim is unquestionably for the good of Europe. On account of the feebleness of the aged Francis Joseph, Francis Ferdinand has had much to do with the government of his country in recent years. On no less than six different occasions he has brought Austria to the brink of war with her neighbors, the catastrophe being averted in each instance only by the temporary restoration of the Emperor to health. The Archduke seems to have patterned himself after Rehoboam of Israel, who boasted that whereas his father had chastised the people with whips, he would chastise them with scorpions. Under the operation of the law of chances murderers are bound now and then to confer benefits, just as good men often cause dire evil through accident.

A TRAIL BUILT BY BOYS.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

And now Uncle Sam and the Boy Scouts are to work together, and when the work is completed the United States government will have a ten-mile trail in a remote part of the White Mountain National Forest, and the boys will have received regular wages for their services, and a varied experience not given to many Scouts or many boys in or out of an organization.

And the Forest Service expects to be the gainer, as well, in that the 24 boys engaged in the making of the trail, and their families and friends, will be brought in close contact with the work of the service and will learn what is being done in the way of practical conservation of the forests.

The camp site will be away from the beaten track of things, in the very heart of the wild, and part of the time will be spent in improving a trail already made, but which must be made accessible to horses. The second stretch will be located in the timber, where no means of quick travel had existed before, and the boys must clear out the brush, do the necessary grading and build culverts and bridges where needed. Of course when rocks must be broken away, the forest officer in charge of the work will use the dynamite, for the Scouts, no matter how big and important and dependable they may be, will not be allowed to handle any explosives.

But they will learn something about forestry, how to handle tools, and how to live and work together with a lot of other boys. And one can easily guess that to teachable boys—and of course boys who enlist in a cause like that and follow the trip from beginning to end are certain to be teachable—the White Mountains will tell some interesting tales.

For a month the work will go on, the boys working only part of each day, unless they want to put in more work-hours some days for the sake of added time for excursions upon other days when the nearby places of interest lure them away.

When the month is over and the Scouts return to their homes in Washington, Baltimore and Boston, will they be prouder of the wages they have earned—the rate is the same as would have been paid to the regular force had the trail been made that way—or will they care more for their sharpened intelligence gained as the clearing was made, for their widened knowledge and practice of Scoutcraft and for the weeks spent in camps on the mountains after the real manner of workday men?

Or, perhaps, will they care most of all for the knowledge that that trail along its ten-mile course through rough mountain ways, was built by themselves? For boys, like the rest of us prideful mortals, like the certainty of having conspicuously figured in work that bears the recognized stamp of usefulness. The trail is designed, particularly, as a means of protection against fire, but it is expected that an increasing number of tourists and timber purchasers will find their way to the White Mountain National Forest because of the new stretch of trail.

And so much for twenty Boy Scouts.

And boys are among the latest recruits to the good roads movement in Minnesota. One of the state highway commissionerss reports that six boys, with an equipment of rakes and other tools, have just completed three miles of road that holds its own with any thereabout. An automobile carried the juvenile road builders to the scene of their work, and when they had covered the stretch, not a stone was in sight, nor a hole, and the road was in first-class condition.

The boys were the gainers, financially and perhaps otherwise, and the district was proud of its road, prouder still of its boys.

The work seems a bit strenuous for boys, and many of us might think that they better keep away from labors of that class, but boys are nothing if not strenuous, and they cannot too soon acquire the dignity, the independence and the confidence that come when they put their shoulder to the wheel and really help.

And that is the chief reason that it always seems hopeful to read or to hear of boys who get close to work that needs to be done. They need not build or repair roads, to be sure, and need not step in where men are employed, but they will come to manhood the stronger, the more resourceful and the more independent for a generous taste of work that is real.

Impossible Claims.

The late George A. Hearn, the millionaire business man and art collector of New York, was noted for his kind and reasonable treatment of his employes. Mr. Hearn used to smile at the new scientific management craze, of which he once said at a dinner:

"These scientific management people with their impossible claims of doubling and trebling a man's labor, remind me of the humble hodcarrier's impossible promise.

"A facetious boss said to a new hodcarrier:

"'Look-a-here, friend, didn't I hire you to carry bricks up that ladder by the day?'

"'Yes, sir,' said the hodcarrier, touching his cap.

"'Well, I've had my eye on you, and you've only done it half a day today. You spent the other half coming down the ladder.'

"The hodcarrier touched him cap again.

"'I'll try to do better tomorrow, sir,' he said, humbly."—New York Tribune.

Why Willie Was Left.

Major Hunt of Cincinnati said of a disgruntled politician:

"His hands are tied. He can do nothing. He is like Willie in the game of snapdragon.

"Willie, at a party given by his sister, was allowed to participate in the snapdragon game, and sat amid a ban of beautiful girls of nineteen or so.

"The lights went out, the usual grabbing for favors began, and then, when the lights went up again, Willie was to be seen crying bitterly.

"'What's the matter, Willie? Didn't you get anything?' a lady asked.

"'No,' sobbed Willie, spitefully. 'As soon at it got dark that consarned man with the brown whiskers—boo, hoo—he grabbed my hands and didn't stop kissing them till the lights went up again!'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Both in and Out.

Mrs. Pankhurst, the English "militant," said at a luncheon in Chicago:

"We are all jailbirds, all of us English militants. I called one afternoon at Mrs. Cobden Sanderson's.

"'Is Mrs. Cobden Sanderson in?' I asked the butler.

"'Yes, madam,' he answered, gravely. 'In for seven months'"—Chicago Record-Herald.

Looking Forward.

"It's taking a lot of work from you doctors, I am afraid," said Mr. Wright, with a mischievous smile. "I feel sorry for the young Dayton medical student I heard about the other day.

"Two medical students were discussing their prospects in the profession when one of them said:

"'To succeed in medicine it is necessary to specialize.'

"'Decidedly,' agreed the other. 'What specialty are you going to choose?'

"'I'm going to specialze in aeroplane accidents—there'll be a great future there.'"—New York World.

He Still Had It.

"Look here, you swindler!" roared the owner of the suburban property to the real estate man. "When you sold me this house, didn't you say that in three months I wouldn't part with it for ten thousand dollars?"

"Certainly," said the real estate dealer calmly; "and you haven't, have you?"—Ladies' Home Journal.

Building to Please Everybody.

"Have you started to build your house yet?"

"No. We haven't quite decided what we want."

"You haven't? I thought you had that all planned out months ago."

"So we did, but Aunt Jane didn't like the living room, so we changed that to suit her, and Uncle Bill thought the porch ought to be different, and we changed that. Then Cousin Kate insisted that we'd never be satisfied without a music room, so we had to rearrange it to put that in, and my folks thought we ought to have a butler's pantry, and her folks were sure we couldn't get along without a room in the attic, and we're waiting now to learn what color an uncle in Honolulu thinks the roof ought to be."—Detroit Free Press.

Reading That Sticks.

An old lady, says the editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, was discussing the differences between the old and the new. "We hadn't anything but the reading book to read when I was a girl," she said, "but I know the best parts of that so I can say them to myself now I'm sitting here in the dark, and my grandchildren don't know what they read last week! It soaked into me and it drips off of them." The editor concludes: "Not what drips off, but that which soaks in is of real importance, stays with the reader and affects and develops character."

Of Course He Swooned.

While the judge was giving his charge to the jury in the burglary case one of the jurymen fainted. His lordship had just impressively said:

"Gentlemen of the jury, in arriving at the verdict you must take the testimony of the witnesses for the defense into consideration and give them full weight."

At the words "and give them full weight" the juryman swooned away. He was a coal merchant.—London Mail.

ST. JOHN'S DAY SERMON TO MASONS

The Masons of the city and the Clinton Chapter, O. E. S., were privileged to listen to a most instructive sermon delivered by the Rev. R. C. Penny of St. George's Lodge of Schenectady Sunday evening at the First Reformed Church, where St. John's Day was celebrated. The Masonic orders met at the lodge rooms and marched to the church in a body, filling nearly all the pews that were reserved for them.

Dr. Leeper introduced the speaker, who spoke on the greatness of John the Baptist, taking for his text a part of the 11th chapter of Mathew, "Verily, I say unto you, among them that are born of woman there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist." Dr. Penny said in part:

"For years and years the birth of a Savior who would rule the people wisely had been heralded. The one cry that a king would be born who would govern the people as never before was heard far and near and the one prayer of many maidens was that they might be the mother of the babe that was to lead all men. For 700 years this event had been expected. The divine promise had been given to some that they should not taste death until the coming of the Messiah and as Christ was born to Mary and Joseph so John the Baptist was born to Elizabeth and Zachariah. His boyhood was ordinary, his manhood noble and sublime; preaching the doctrine of love and right living, and proclaiming the greatness of the Christ whose shoes he was not worthy to unlatch. The first thing we note in the life of John was his Christian home and influence. The first duty of a father is not to accumulate a great fortune so that his son can live a life of useless leisure after he is gone, but rather to make a home where Christ is no stranger and the Bible a book of life. A home is a failure if it is not the place where Christian character is built. I would rather be poor and my grave unmarked, my name unsung, than to come down to the grave without that Christian home. If the men who have worshipped in this old church through all the years of its history could give to you a message today, that message I believe, would be to make the home the first place for the development of Christian character.

"John was a Nazarene, full of the holy spirit, and had learned to control himself, for he who controleth himself is greater than he who leads a whole army. The great purpose of this life is not to build an enormous fortune, but to build a noble life. We are living in a great age—in an age when living is sublime and the great man is the man of will power and strength of character.

"John's message was not to the rich or to the poor alone, but to all men, regardless of circumstances. His one thought was that we were all brothers and sisters in the sight of God, and his mission was not to one class alone, but to call all men to repentance.

"John was a divinely ordered messenger. God moves in a mysterious way, and is very patient in bringing things to pass, but there is not a day that comes but what the hand of God is working for the good of his children. John did his best, and that is all that is asked of us. We are too apt to think that the ministry is the only profession that is called of God. Every honorable labor is the labor of God, whether it be doctor, lawyer, merchant or farmer, and each and every problem that comes before a professional man is God's problem. I love to think that God calls every one to a specific service, and every one of our actions is recorded, not only the bad by the good that we do. We may often fail but God knows our intentions where others misjudge us.

"John developed a devout reverence for God. Have you ever gone off in the mountains by yourself, away from the noise of the busy world, and thought of God? If you haven't, do it. Watch the stars, listen to the birds, keep quiet, hardly breath, think of your God who created all things, and you will depart a better man, with higher ambitions, and a greater desire to conquer God's problems. John did this, for he never could have faced the problems of his time if he had not quietly communed with his God.

"John the Baptist" was a great reformer. The tendency these days is to look at a reformer as a sort of 'crab,' with long hair, tight trowsers and a long look; who goes about the world with a moan and no message. This is not so. A day never dawned in the history of the Empire State when men of John's character were more needed. Your city has a wonderful history. The first capital of the state, great statesmen have lived and died here. Great heroes have fought on these grounds, but in spite of all this, I say to you this day that you have greater need today, in the city of Kingston of more men with characters like John the Baptist than ever before. I do not know the local conditions here, bt I know what it is in many places, and what this city, this state, this nation needs the most is men with noble characters. We have too many men who are seeking public life for private gain. The day of the reformer is here.

"John was a man of honor. When asked who he was he did not say that he was the Christ, or the great prophet that they had been expecting for centuries. He could have easily said this and received the glory of the world. But no, he claimed no honor for himself but simply called all men to repentance, and taught them the ways of life. He was a martyr to principle. He was 'mprisoned and beheaded, because he dared denounce the king, in his sinful actions. He could have easily flattered the king, and the queen, thus getting in their good graces, but a noble principle was of far more value than a life. My desire this evening is to see developed in the young men of this nation more of the characteristics of John the Baptist. We are not required to be great or rich, but we are required to be good. Remember that he who saveth his life shall lose it and he who loseth it shall find it."

PUNCHING HOLES AGAIN.

Annual Performance on Broadway to Locate a Gas Leak.

The annual event of punching holes in the brick pavement on lower Broadway to find a leak in the gas main started this morning when employes of the gas company were busy at work punching holes in the pavement between the Strand and Ferry street to locate a leak. It is claimed that this is the only method by which a leak can be discovered. After punching the hole the employe leans down and sniffs. If he smells gas the leak is found. If not, he punches another hole a little further on down the street. The punching can not be truthfully said to improve the pavement to any appreciable extent.

BEAUTY OF THE HUDSON.

Its Picturesque Scenery Far Surpasses That of the Rhine.

The Hudson river is very remarkable in several respects. In the first place, for 150 miles of its length it is not a true river but a fiord. From Albany to the ocean its rock bottom, with the exception of a few islands, is below sea level. How far below, it is not accurately known. Opposite Storm King mountain engineers bored a thousand feet down into the dirt and sand that fill the gorge under the water and did not find rock bottom. The shore line at Albany is at practically the same elevation as the shore line at New York, and the tide rises at Albany two and eight-tenths feet. The upward and downward flowing of the tide, of which Hudson took advantage in his voyage, had long been noticed by the Indians, who spoke of the river with wonder as the stream that flowed both ways.

The river is unsurpassed for its great natural beauty. The distinguished German surgeon, Dr. Adolph Lorenz, in 1902 declared it more beautiful than the Rhine, which depends on the castles on its banks for its main charm. Primarily, the beauty of the Hudson is due to the extraordinary range of its geological history. From its source to the sea it is an epitome of creation. It rises in the Adirondack mountains, which tower to a great height. The famous Highlands of the Hudson, between which Hudson sailed 300 years ago, are of the same Archaean rocks and were once a group of islands. The Catskills are more modern and the Palisades still younger. The latter rising sheer 300 to 500 feet above the water's edge, were once a fiery molten mass and their columnar shape is due to the manner in which the mass cooled off.

These facts indicate what a storehouse for fascinating research the Hudson valley is for the person, young or old, who will study it with the mind as well as with the eye.—Edith Townsend Kaufmann in Leslie's.

SOLONS AND SALARIES.

Some European States Pay Their Lawmakers Only a Mite.

Italy and Spain are the only European countries which offer no monetary reward to their members of parliament. The Portuguese legislators are not remunerated by the state, but they have a free pass for traveling on all railways in the country, and their constituencies are permitted to pay a sum equivalent to 15 shillings for each day's sitting.

Denmark is another country which believes that its political gentlemen are ready to work for almost nothing. Members of parliament there only receive 6 shillings per day, but they have the peculiar privilege of a free seat in the Royal theater in Copenhagen.

The Norwegian honorable member is thankful for a daily income of 12 shillings, though he must do his duty properly to get it. He loses a day's pay when he takes a day off. Members of the Swiss diet work under the same threat. If they are absent they lose salary which amounts in their case to 16 shillings per day.

Roumania pays her lawmakers a sovereign per day, and Bulgaria offers 16 shillings. In the latter country members living in the capital have 4 shillings deducted because they have no train fares to pay and only one home to keep up.

Hungary treats her statesmen just half as well as England does, allowing them £200 per annum. They have, however, a liberal allowance for house rent and can travel first class with second class tickets.—London Tit-Bits.

Keeping Your Word.

The following quotation from De Morgan's "When Ghost Meets Ghost" may help a few to see the moral issue more clearly. Mr. Jerry began feebly, "You can't do more than keep your word, Mo." * * * Mo, a fine old ex-prisefighter, replies:

"Yes, you can, Jerry. You can keep your meanin'. And you can do more than that. You can keep to what the other party thought you meant, when you know. I know this time. I ain't in a court o' justice, Jerry, dodgin' about, and I know when I'm square by the feel."

Played With Fire Balls.

For many centuries polo, or chaugan, as it was then called, was a favorite pastime with Asiatic rulers. A contemporary annalist records of Akbar, the greatest of Mogul emperors, that "he plays at chaugan on dark nights, the balls being set on fire. For the sake of adding splendor to the game his majesty has knobs of gold and silver fixed to the chaugan sticks. If one of these breaks any player that gets hold of the pieces may keep them."

Good Advice.

Throw Old Boots Into Sea.

A queer way of disposing of their old boots is followed by the Colombo police. When these "cast offs" have accumulated to a figure bordering round a thousand they are taken down to the police hulk in the harbor and thrown into the sea. Formerly, policemen were allowed to dispose of these, when they became unserviceable, but according to new regulations, they have to return to headquarters all boots when they get worn out.

CANTINE STANDS BY SAUGERTIES

Will Rebuild Tissue Mill There Despite Generous Offers From Other Places—Business to be Enlarged by Erection of a Paper Mill.

Saugertiesians will be rejoiced to know that the Tissue Company whose large mill was destroyed by fire some time ago has decided to rebuild in that village and will soon have a large plant employing 150 hands. Martin Cantine, president of the Tissue Company, has received offers from a large number of cities to locate in those places, in some instances big bonuses being offered, tracts of land and subscription to blocks of stock of the company. The concern has turned a deaf ear to all of these offers and will start work this week in Saugerties.

Announcement was made in Saugerties today that Byron Davis, who last week purchased of Henry Genthner over nine acres of land north of Ulster avenue and extending along the West Shore railroad, had been sold to the Martin Cantine Company. The consideration mentioned is $100. On this property will be erected a large steel warehouse for storing the products of the Martin Cantine Company. On the same land will be erected a building for the Tissue Company of steel and brick. When this mill is completed the company will manufacture crepe paper, towels, paper napkins, etc.

One hundred and fifty hands will be employed and this will give great impetus to the industrial life of Saugerties which suffered a severe blow when the tissue mill was destroyed. Plans have been prepared and contracts let for the work. It is expected that it will require from four to six months to complete this work. A large storage dam for water will also be built.

In addition to this work will be started this week on a large storage house for the Martin Cantine Company on the site of the burned tissue mill. R. R. Livingston, consulting engineer for the Martin Cantine Company, will have supervision of the work. The Martin Cantine Company has also procured a right of way eighteen feet wide between the lands of F. G. Phelps and R. B. Overbagh.

When it is considered that the Tissue Company has received offers from cities far away as Chattanooga, Tenn., the people of Saugerties have reason to be proud that the company has decided to retain its plant in its home town.

New Paper Mill.

The last but least of the important announcements made in Saugerties this week was one that will also be gladly welcomed. It is nothing less than that there will be erected in the near future a large factory for the manufacture of paper. The pulp will be brought to Saugerties and the raw material made up there. Formerly this has been done outside of the village and the paper brought there for treatment. This will revolutionize the paper industry business in Saugerties and mean another big industry added to the town. While no announcement has been made of the contracts let, etc., in connection with this plant the source of the news is reliable.

The new tissue mill will be 256 x248 feet in dimensions and one story high. Charles McNalley will be the superintendent on this work, plans having been prepared by R. R. Livingston.

Lawn Party on Tuesday.

The Colonial Chapter of the Westminster Guild of the Rondout Presbyterian Church will hold a lawn party at the residence of Mrs. Walter N. Gill, 51 Abruyn street on Tuesday from 4 o'clock in the afternoon to 1 o'clock in the evening. A short program will be rendered in the evening and homemade cake and candy will be for sale. If stormy the party will be held on Wednesday.

Horse Caught in Manhole.

It was a fortunate thing for D. Samuels, the Strand fruit dealer, that the manhole in the pavement in front of his store was not any larger or he would have lost a horse in the sewer this morning when the animal stepped through the manhole cover which was broken. The horse was extricated with considerable difficulty and was badly cut about the legs.

CAR ABANDONED BY JOY RIDERS

Friday evening Elmer R. S. Husted of Stanfordville left his Ford automobile standing on Catherine street in Poughkeepsie and when he came back he found that the machine was missing and reported the theft to the Poughkeepsie police, who sent out a general alarm. The car was later discovered about 8 o'clock on Saturday evening standing deserted on Main street near Pennington's studio and Sunday afternoon it was taken to the police barn, where it awaits its owner.

It is thought that the car was taken by some people who had been in Poughkeepsie attending the boat races and when they came across the car standing alone on the street they decided to have a joy ride and jumped aboard and headed for Kingston. Evidently one of the joy riders was able to drive a car for the machine when recovered was uninjured.

The machine was first seen by Mr. Pennington on Saturday evening and he thought that the owner had left it there while making a call. When he found the car still standing there on Sunday morning he was puzzled and he informed Policeman Johnston of the fact.

As no one seems to have seen the car left on Main street by the joy riders, it is likely that the identity of those who helped themselves to the car will never be known.

SAVED BY SHEAR.

Shell Game Broken Up by Superintendent of Schools.

Superintendent Shear had his righteous indignation aroused Friday afternoon when he saw a couple of shell game and three-card swindlers working the gullible crowds at Highland, near the ferry house.

One young countryman had lost $20 and another $5. Quite a crowd had assembled, most of whom were eager to try their "luck."

Summoning to his aid two men of Highland village, Mr. Shear stepped up to the men and denounced them as law breakers and swindlers.

The men didn't stop to argue the matter, but seized their tables and ran, the righteous in pursuit.

The excitement rose at every step. The fleeing artists were soon overhauled and compelled to disgorge the $25 the had taken.

"These regattas should be policed," was the remark Professor Shear would make when asked about the incident. "In the absence of a police officer or sheriff, a few of us had to act; that was all."—Poughkeepsie Star.

Twice Arrested and Discharged.

John Sullivan and George Steward were arrested on Saturday evening by Policemen Boyd and Connelly for being drunk and disorderly and when arraigned before Recorder Grogan on Sunday morning they were discharged on their promise to get out of town. Sunday afternoon they took aboard a still further supply of joy water and started a disturbance on Abruyn street, and were taken into custody by Policeman Dempsey. This morning when arraigned before the recorder they pleaded so hard for liberty that they were again discharged on their promise to get out of town in twenty minutes.

Auto a Tree Climber.

The front wheel of the car was knocked off and the front of the machine was damaged. It was taken to Van's garage for repairs. No one was injured.

Centenary of the Battle of Plattsburgh Is to Be Observed Sept. 6-11 With Notable Ceremonies on Scene of Action

COMMODORE THOMAS MACDONOUGH, U. S. N. SCENE OF BATTLE. GENERAL ALEXANDER MACOMB, U. S. A.

THE celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the Battle of Plattsburgh will be held at Plattsburgh, N. Y., on Sept. 6-11. The program for the event is now nearing completion, and the Plattsburgh centenary commission, which is arranging the details, purposes an event long to be remembered.

The plans of the commission call for a six days' celebration as well as the erection of suitable memorials to Commodore Thomas Macdonough, General Alexander Macomb and their men who were the heroes of the engagement which has been described as the most decisive of the war of 1812.

To commemorate the battle appropriately and to honor the memory of the heroic dead the state of New York has appropriated $125,000 and named a commission of eighteen prominent citizens, legislators and statesmen to take charge of the details. The federal government is expected to make a liberal appropriation, so that the event in September promises to be on a scale in keeping with the importance of its historic character and to command the attention of the world.

According to the program, Sunday, Sept. 6, will be devoted to religious ceremonies in all of the churches of Plattsburgh and vicinity and at the Catholic Summer School of America at Cliff Haven, two miles south of Plattsburgh. Prominent dignitaries of different denominations are expected to take part in these services.

Monday, Sept. 7 (Labor day), will be devoted to ceremonies appropriate to Labor day. Among the prominent men who will speak after the parade will be John Mitchell and Samuel Gompers.

A Historic Pageant.

Tuesday, Sept. 8, is set apart for appropriate exercises at Vergennes, Vt., commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of the building of Macdonough's fleet at that place. The next three days will be devoted to historical pageants, parades, public addresses, etc., at Plattsburgh. The Clinton county fair will be in progress that week, and one day there will be addresses there by distinguished men of national prominence. On Friday evening there will be a banquet, at which it is hoped to have addresses by President Wilson, some member of his cabinet, former Presidents Roosevelt, and Taft and the governors of New York and Vermont. There will be daily band concerts by Doring's band of Troy (forty pieces), and there will be fireworks on Friday night.

The commission which has charge of the event is headed by Francis Lynde Stetson, the New York lawyer, and among its members are former Lieutenant Governor Thomas F. Conway, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt, Rev. John P. Chidwick, former chaplain of the Maine; Senator James A. Foley, former Senator Henry W. Hill, Frederick E. Wadhams, secretary of the State Bar association and associated with the Sons of the Revolution; Henry Harmon Noble, an official of the Society of 1812; Senators Loren H. White, James A. Emerson, John F. Healy and Henry M. Sage and Assemblymen Salvatore A. Cotillo, Joseph H. Esquirol, Alexander W. Fairbank, former Assemblymen John H. Dorst, Jr., and Charles J. Vert and Attorney Irving I. Goldsmith.

Effect of Battle.

That the battle which it is now proposed to celebrate had a most profound effect upon the destiny of our country is admitted almost unanimously by historians. But one need not go to the historians to get this information. In an official letter to the Hon. Charles Tate, chairman of the naval committee of the senate, Sept. 19, 1814, Secretary of the Navy Jones, speaking of this battle, said, "To view it in abstract, it is not surpassed by any naval victory on record; to appreciate its results, it is perhaps one of the most important events in the history of our country."

Captain A. T. Mahan, U. S. N., one of the most famous authorities in the world in naval matters, says in his "Sea Power In Its Relations to the War of 1812:"

"The battle of Lake Champlain more nearly than any other incident of the war of 1812 merits the word 'decisive'—decisive not merely in relation to immediate military result, but in relation to political questions involved in the pending negotiations for peace."

Superiority on the Lakes.

It had become an object of solicitude with the belligerent parties on the northern frontier to obtain the superiority on the lakes. Indeed, the success of the land operations was considered to be entirely dependent on that of the marine. Commander Perry had already established our dominion on Lake Erie, and that of Lake Ontario had been successfully disputed by Commodore Chauncey with Sir James Yeo. Vermont and New York were threatened from Lake Champlain. To counteract hostile attempts from this quarter the command of the American squadron on this lake was intrusted to Commodore Macdonough, while the defense of Plattsburgh depended on the exertions of General Macomb and his gallant little army. In September, 1814, an attack was anticipated on these youthful commanders. Accordingly on the 11th of that month the expected event took place.

For several days the enemy had been on his way to Plattsburgh by land and water, and it was well understood that an attack would be made at the same time by his land and naval forces. Commodore Macdonough determined to wait at anchor the approach of the latter.

At 8 o'clock in the morning the lookout boat announced the approach of the enemy. At 9 he anchored in a line ahead, at about 300 yards distance from the American line. His flagship, the Confiance, under Commodore Downie, opposed Commodore Macdonough's ship, the Saratoga; the brig Linnett was opposed to the Eagle (Captain Robert Henley). Each side had smaller craft at hand.

Both sides became hotly engaged. The Saratoga suffered much from the heavy fire of the Confiance, though the fire of the former was very destructive to her antagonist. The Ticonderoga, Lieutenant Commodore Cassin, gallantly sustained her full share of the action. At half past 10 o'clock the Eagle, not being able to bear, cut her cable and anchored in a more eligible position between the Saratoga and the Ticonderoga, where she very much annoyed the enemy, but unfortunately left her commodore exposed to a galling fire from the enemy's brig. The guns of the Saratoga on the starboard sides being all dismounted or not manageable, a stern anchor was let go, the bower cable cut and the ship winded with a fresh broadside on the Confiance, which soon after surrendered. The broadside of the Saratoga was then sprung to bear on the brig, which surrendered within about fifteen minutes.

All Vessels Sinking.

The sloop that was opposed to the Eagle had struck some time before and drifted down the line, the sloop which was with the enemy's galleys having also struck. Three of them were sunk and the other pulled off. While Macdonough's galleys were in the act of obeying the signal to follow them all the vessels were reported to him to be in a sinking state. It then became necessary to countermand the signal to the galleys and order their men to the pumps.

At this time not a mast was standing in either squadron in a condition to hold up a sail. The lower rigging, being nearly all shot away, hung down along the mast.

The action lasted without intermission two hours and twenty minutes. The Confiance had 105 round shot in her hull. Her shot passed principally over the head of her antagonist. The hull of the Saratoga received fifty-five shots, and at the close of the action not twenty whole hammocks were in the nettings. The Confiance had 100 men killed, and one of the captured sloops, the Chub, had but five men alive. The Americans lost, killed and wounded, 112. The British commodore, Downie, was killed at the first broadside. Commodore Macdonough was three times knocked down by the splinters and falling spars, but escaped with trifling injury. The Saratoga was twice set on fire by hot shot from the enemy's ship.

The gallant Macdonough, with a much smaller force than his antagonist in men and guns, had by skillful disposition and brave defense won a remarkable and decisive victory and completely disconcerted a deep laid scheme of invasion.

Admiral Mahan says: "The war was practically ended by Prevost's retreat. What remained was purely episodical in character and should be so regarded."

The Land Engagement.

The story of the land engagement, too long for an ordinary newspaper article, is one filled with dramatic details, with remarkable examples of bravery, with evidences of heroic self sacrifices, such as warm the heart of the patriot and add to the luster of the American flag.

Early in September, 1814, General Sir George Prevost, the British commander, having received important re-enforcements to his army, determined to put a speedy end to the war. With 14,000 trained fighters, fresh from military triumphs in Europe under the Duke of Wellington, as opposed to a mere fragment of a comparatively untrained army under General Macomb, he expected and had every reason to expect a quick and decisive victory. The fleet under Captain Downie, an old and experienced officer, was in every way superior in vessels and guns and more effectively manned than the Macdonough squadron, and Prevost never entertained a doubt of the ultimate success of his expedition. But he had reckoned without his host. Beginning a simultaneous attack on land and water, he was as gallantly met by Macdonough and as bravely resisted by Macomb. The whole British fleet was captured and the army on shore routed and dispersed. The science of the two young Americans measured lances against the British commander, who depended on a dead weight of physical forces, and mind conquered matter.

A study of the private and public character of these two young commanders will cause patriotic citizens to cherish their memories for their many excellent traits of character as men, for the example of their military achievements will encourage young men who may take up the profession to emulate their active perseverance, devotion and gallantry as officers.

This celebration, if it does nothing else, will stimulate the study of this war, and for this fact the commission deserves the thanks of the state and country. The commission has issued a very excellent little pamphlet entitled "The Battle of Plattsburgh—What Historians Say About It," which tells the story in succinct form and may be had for the asking upon application to Assistant Secretary Howard D. Hadley, Plattsburgh, N. Y.

The Free Movies.

The photo-drama of Creation, which will be presented at the Kingston opera house for the next two weeks under the joint auspices of the International Bible Student's Association and the Chamber of Commerce, gave its opening performances Sunday afternoon and evening. Both were largely attended and created an excellent impression. Some annoyance was caused by the noise created by late-comers, which drowned out the voice of the lecturer, so that the management has been compelled to request that all persons shall be in their seats when the production commenced, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Esopus Corporation Assigns.

Some time ago the Julius Bien Company, a New York corporation having its principal office in the town of Esopus, made a general assignment for the benefit of creditors to Sheldon Franklin, Jr. Today the matter came before Judge Jenkins at county court chambers, when a motion was made for an order permitting the assignee to sell the stock of the Bien Company to A. N. Gettermann for $26,000. A number of letters from creditors asking that the motion be granted were received. Judge Jenkins reserved decision. Grove Webster, Jr., appeared for Mr. Grand, attorney for the assignee.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 29.—Business was small at the opening of the stock market today, but the undertone was steady. Considerable interest was directed toward United Dry Goods preferred, which sold at 65, an advance of 12 points from the low point which it reached on Friday, following the Claflin failure. Union Pacific began ¼ higher and soon increased this gain. Atchison, Western Union, United States Steel Common, Southern Pacific, New York Central, Canadian Pacific and Lehigh Valley were fractionally higher. Amalgamated Copper were also fractionally lower. The curb was firm. Americans in London were steady, showing no direct effect from the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir apparent to the Austrian throne.

Noon—Stocks ranged slightly lower in the late forenoon and trading was dull, with the price movements the narrowest noted in a long time. United States Steel Common was the weakest, declining ⅜ to 60⅛. Amalgamated Copper was off ¼, Union Pacific, Western Union and Erie ⅛. New Haven sold at 64¼, a net loss of ¾. Other issues weak. Call money loaning at 1¾.

2:30 p. m.—The list showed improvement in the last hour and some of the stocks which had sold off earlier in the afternoon recovered and scored fractional gains. Amalgamated Copper after selling down to 67⅝ went to 70. Steel was fractionally above its low mark and so was Union Pacific and Western Union. The tone was steady.

The stock market closed steady, governments unchanged; other bonds steady.

Brogue Is Real English.

According to some language students Irish brogue is the ancient way of pronouncing English, preserved in its purity by residents of the Emerald Isle.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Invitations have been received in this city from the Rev. Dr. Michael Salley, to the wedding of his niece, Miss Elizabeth Honora Salley to Dr. John George O'Leary of this city. The ceremony will take place at St. Patrick's Church, Newburgh, N. Y., on the morning of Thursday, July 16, at 11:30 o'clock and will be followed by a wedding breakfast at the rectory of St. Patrick's Church at 12:30 o'clock.

Grey skies did not affect the members of the Twaalfskill Club who gathered on Saturday afternoon in large numbers to witness the closing rounds in the golf tournament. Miss Dorothy Schoonmaer and Miss Kate Van Etten were the hostesses, and were assisted by Miss Sarah Horton, Miss Marjorie Drake, Miss Jeanette Sanford, Miss Delta Boice, Miss Hilterbrant and Miss Goodrich, all of whom most hospitably received and entertained not only the members of the club, but the upwards of seventy-five out of town visitors who came to watch the closing play. After the scores were closed Judge Clearwater, president of the club, on behalf of the Hudson River Golf Association, presented to the winners the trophy cups and medals. Harold B. Wood of Hudson, who won the championship of the association, received the gold medal, and his club the custody of the large silver punch bowl which goes with the championship. To Howard G. Phillips of the Saegkill, the runner up in the championship, was presented the cup given by William H. Coldwell, vice-president of the association. In presenting the cups Judge Clearwater said that in the course of its long history Kingston always had endeavored to maintain the traditions of a generous hospitality a hospitality which had been extended to many distinguished men, and many distinguished visiting organizations. That there were few of these whom it had welcomed more warmly than the members of the Hudson River Golf Association who cultivated and upheld the best ideals of American golf. That while the governors of the club nominally arranged for the entertainment of the visiting golfers, the real and actual honor of the occasion belonged to Frank Coykendall, the treasurer of the Twaalfskill, who now and always had been indefatigable in his efforts to promote the happiness of all who loved the ancient and honorable game of golf. Dr. Smith, of Yonkers, president of the association, in a brief reply said that not only did Kingston enjoy along the Hudson but throughout the country a most enviable reputation for generous hospitality, but there was about the Twaalfskill and its members a certain tone of distinction which made it a great pleasure for the members of the association to visit Kingston and the Twaalfskill links. The full score of the closing games of the tournament are as follows:

Balfe-Flynn.

Miss Agnes Flynn and Merrill Balfe, both of this city, were united in marriage on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at St. Peter's Church by the Rev. George H. Wermuth. They were attended by Miss Mary Flynn and Edward Reis.

Allen-Bromby.

An interesting and attractive marriage was solemnized on the morning of Monday, June 22, in St. Mark's Church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Luke M. White, rector of the church. The high contracting parties were Miss Nora Kathleen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Haydn Bromby, and William Henry Allen, formerly of England, now a resident of the United States. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Miss Elba Helpman for processional, but for recessional, the Mendelssohn wedding march was very fittingly rendered by Mr. Bromby, who is organist and choir master for St. Mark's Church. His task of bestowing his daughter upon the man of her choice having been accomplished, Mr. Bromby appropriately played the beautiful music ushering her steps into a new life. The bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. The wedding gown was of grandmother swiss with a waist of Princess lace, made with a draped tunic caught in the back with handsome bows of white satin ribbon. Her hat was of white chip with trimming of fluffy bows of white tulle. Her flowers were Bermuda lilies. The bride's attendant was Miss Lenora Poleman, whose dress was of green crepe de chine, her hat of white trimmed in green plumes, and she carried Killarney roses. The groom's best man was George Haydn Bromby, Jr., the brother of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Allen left on the noon train for Hot Springs, and on their return will be at home on Oakland street, where they will be established at housekeeping. Mrs. Allen's going-away gown was of wisteria silk moire, a three piece suit, worn with hat to match. Mr. Allen is a violinist of marked ability and has just concluded a successful season at Warrenton, Va. Both Mr. and Mrs. Allen have many friends in their native England and in their adopted home in America who wish them well both now and through their future lives. Mrs. Bromby, mother of the bride, looked exceedingly well in a dream of flowered tissue, worn with a white hat trimmed in flowers. A small circle of friends witnessed the marriage, all persons of high social position and members of St. Mark's Church, personal friends of Mr. Bromby and his family, the Rev. Arthur Kenyon and Mrs. Kenyon, Mrs. Floyd R. Hodges, Mrs. T. B. Chase, Mrs. James Duncan and Miss Emily Poleman.—Shreveport, La., Times.

Jansen Steen of Stone Ridge and four others started on an automobile trip to Middletown on Sunday but only got as far as Kerhonkson. There they stopped for gasoline and five gallons was put in the tank, causing it to overflow. The surplus gasoline got on the mechanism of the engine and when they started burst into flames. The occupants of the car had to jump to save their lives and the car was burned. The remnants of it were towed to Van's garage this morning.

They Want Their Locals.

Residents along the Ulster & Delaware railroad between Arkville and Oneonta have filed a petition with the public service commission asking that the railroad place trains 3 and 4 back on the running schedule. These two trains are known as the Arkville scoops and run between that place and Oneonta. Train 3 left Arkville at 6:35 a. m. and arrived at Oneonta at 8:45 a. m., while train 4 left Oneonta at 5:15 in the afternoon reaching Arkville at 7:30 p. m. Both trains were taken off the run when the new summer schedule went into effect on Sunday, but the residents along the line in some manner became aware that the trains would be taken off and got up the petition. With the new summer schedule in effect the first train leaving Arkville is train 9 at 9:49 a. m. which reaches Oneonta at 12:05 p. m. and leaves Oneonta at 2:55 p. m. The scoops will continue running as usual, although not appearing on the new summer schedule, until the public service commission holds a hearing in the matter

Barnes of Albany avenue caught one of her fingers in the fan and cut it quite badly. She has been attended by Dr. George H. Van Gaasbeek and the finger, though still painful, is not in dangerous condition. Statements that she is in danger of losing the finger seem to be the product of the B. S. L. The screens are protected in the usual manner, but additional precautions have been taken by the Van Wagenen Company to prevent accidents.

TRAPPING ELEPHANTS.

In India Tame Animals Aid In Capturing the Wild Ones.

In view of the vast strength possessed by full grown elephants, it seems at first sight almost incredible that they can be captured in herds and quickly subdued to the will of their masters.

At the present time, in Mysore, the regular method of capturing wild elephants is for a large number of natives to go into the jungle, some mounted on tamed elephants and many on foot, and to make a great noise and hullabaloo, which results in driving herds of the wild elephants into stockades, or often into ponds of water, which have previously been surrounded on all sides, except at the approaches, by immensely strong palisades. As soon as the herd is cornered the passages that had been left open are securely closed, and then the trained elephants are brought into play to cajole and subdue the perplexed prisoners.

In India elephants are no longer captured, as they still are in Africa, by means of huge pitfalls in the ground. In these traps they are often seriously injured or killed. The Indian elephant is somewhat smaller than the African and differs from it in other ways—as, for instance, in the fact that tusks are possessed only by the males, while both sexes are provided with them in Africa. In general, also, the tusks of African elephants are nearly twice as large as those of their Indian relatives, a single pair sometimes weighing as much as 250 or 300 pounds.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

I could thatch the sky with summonses."

New York, June 29.—Heinie Zimmerman, of the Chicago Cubs, who hasn't even one friend among all the umpires, but who isn't losing sleep because of that fact, says:

"Golf's a swell thing as an aid to batting."

Heinie then pointed out that the business of swinging the brassie, the midiron and other clubs that a golfer uses in making long drives, develops the swinging power of the arm. The business of putting aids all batters who want to lay down a bunt. A putt has to be timed perfectly. The putter must hit the ball just right—not too hard, not too easy.

"And that's the way with a bunt," remarks Heinie. "You've got to lay your bunt out far enough so that the catcher can't get it before you reach first, and you've got to drop it in close enough to the plate so that the third baseman or first baseman can't grab it and beat you to the bag with a throw.

In golf you've got to keep your eye on the ball. And it's the same way with baseball. From the way I look at it a good golfer has the makings of a mighty good hitter in a ball game. And I know from experience that golfing keeps the batting eye.

Don't be surprised if one Gunboat Smith sends over word from England that he doesn't care to vote here anyway and that he's taken out citizenship in the land made famous by Emmy Pankhurst.

Gunboat went over to England a short period back for the purpose of swapping punches with one Georges Carpentier of France. When Gunboat landed half of England was at the pier to meet him. A brass band pounded out "Here Comes the Hero" harmony, a reception committee bundled Gunboat in a huge automobile and he was whisked away to be wined and dined in kingly style.

They "blew" Gunboat to a reception where everybody wore open faced clothes. It was really fashionable crowd. And, strange as it may seem to those who hold punching persons in light regard in this country, the crowd attended, not merely because it wanted to get a close view of America's best white hope, but because it really wanted to meet him, to talk to him, and so that it might later boast of the honor.

The greeting England afforded Gunboat surprised him quite a bit at first. But, recalling how the American public usually greets prize fighters, he figured that the folks just wanted to get a sort of dime-museum look at him. Since then Gunboat has become convinced that the receptions given him were real showings of pride in the achievements of a man, and he feels so good about it that he may decide to cast his lot with John Bull in future.

You can say all the slighting things you want about the general policing ability of the cops in this town, but you can't take away from the "foorce" the credit for having helped a lot in Uncle Sam's Olympic triumphs.

The extremely athletic members of the "foorce" have scored sixty-three points for the U. S. A. in the different Olympic combats, assisting materially in winning four championships for Uncle Sam: 1904 in St. Louis; 1906 at Athens; 1908 at London, and 1912 at Stockholm.

* * * *

The five who helped so materially were Martin Sheridan, Bill Frank, Matt McGrath, John Flannagan and Pat McDonald. The other three, Egon Erickson, Jacker Eller and Simon Gillies, also have been point winners, but not to such an extent as the five other huskies.

Dick Egan, of the Dodgers, is a lucky person. Dick used to play with Cincinnati but the Dodgers purchased him from the Reds for $5,000. The Dodgers had planned to pay him just an ordinary salary but the Feds horned in with a pretty large offer to Richard as soon as he got back from the world tour. Fearing that the Feds might get him, the president of the Dodgers boosted their bid and Dick decided to stick with organized baseball.

* * * *

It is said that the Dodgers signed up Dick finally at a salary of $7,000 annually for three years, erasing the ten days notice clause from his contract, which made the contract ironclad as far as its fulfillment by the Dodger management was concerned.

* * * *

Dick played pretty good play in the Dodger's infield for the first five or six weeks and then cracked. He now is on the bench and is of no value whatever to the Dodgers, as they have harpooned a couple of youngsters who look far better than the veteran Egan. But Ebbets must go on paying Dick that $7,000 until the end of the 1916 season, unless some other club takes Dick off his hands—a happening that is not probable.

Bug Bites Alarmed Them.

It appears that bugs have only been known in England since 1500 A. D., when the poor Huguenots and other Protestants were accused of carrying them across the channel. One day two court ladies discovered marks upon their fair persons and were panic-stricken. Such marks could only be plague spots, thought they?
